Obama, Clinton Fundraise in N.Y.

Despite differences, presidents hobnob, bringing in $3.6M

New York

President Obama sought to take advantage Monday of the fundraising prowess of former President Bill Clinton, the most reliable deliverer of Democratic dollars, despite their history of testy relations and differences on campaign tactics.

Tied with his likely Republican challenger in the polls and facing a summer of economic uncertainty that could pull the United States back toward recession, Obama needs the help.

Clinton and Obama were sharing top billing at a trio of events in New York City, bringing in at least $3.6 million to Obama's re-election campaign.

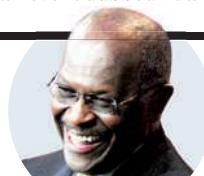

Obama campaign bundler and billionaire investor Marc Lasry was holding an exclusive reception Monday night, followed by a gala at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel. The evening was to conclude with an event dubbed "Barack on Broad-

Former President Clinton's ability to deliver campaign dollars makes him an asset to President Obama's re-election campaign that apparently outweighs any drawbacks.

Fighting Words

Former President Clinton and President Obama focused their message Monday on economic opportunity. Polls show that economic trends are likely to determine the election, a development that could help Romney if the economy sags significantly. Obama and Romney were tied at 46 percent in Gallup polling last week of national election preferences. Obama says the economy will be the central issue of the campaign, and Clinton told donors Monday that electing Mitt Romney would be, in his words, "calamitous for our country and the world." (AP)

Broadcasting Cain: Conservative talk radio host Neal Boortz announced his retirement Monday after four decades at the microphone, saying he will be replaced by former GOP presidential hopeful Herman Cain. "We tell people the cold, hard truth and the facts," Cain told Boortz during his show Monday. "I want to continue to express my views and help educate people about what's going on in this country." Boortz's last day will be Jan. 21, 2013. (AP)

U.S. Gives Spy Telescopes to NASA

Washington

The U.S. government's secret space program has decided to give NASA two telescopes as big as, and even more powerful than, the Hubble Space Telescope.

Designed for surveillance, the telescopes from the National Reconnaissance Office were no longer needed for spy missions and can now be used to study the heavens.

The space agency confirmed Monday that it has received a pair of giant identical telescopes from the National Reconnaissance Office, which oversees the country's constellation of spy satellites. NASA says the spy agency built them and then decided it didn't need them.

More Eyes on the Sky

The gift of two giant telescopes is definitely a game-changer for NASA's space science program and offers the agency an opportunity to resurrect a plan to study the mysterious "dark energy," the hypothetical form of energy that permeates all of space and causes the universe's expansion to accelerate. The scientific community had made the dark energy telescope a top priority. (TWP)

The transfer last summer was only recently declassified.

They have 7.9-foot mirrors, just like the Hubble. They also have an additional feature that the civilian space telescopes lack: a maneuverable secondary mirror that makes it possible to obtain more focused images. NASA official Michael Moore gave some hint of what a Hubble-class space telescope might do if used for national security: "With a Hubble here you could see a dime sitting on top of the Washington Monument."

NASA officials stressed that they do not have a program to launch even one telescope, and that at the very earliest, it would be 2020 before one of the two gifted telescopes could be in order.

Facebook Mulls Under-13 Access

New York

Though Facebook bans children under 13, millions of them have profiles by lying about their age.

The company is now testing ways to allow those kids to participate without needing to lie. This would likely be under parental supervision, such as by connecting children's accounts to their parents' accounts.

Like many other online services, Facebook prohibits kids under 13 because federal law requires companies to obtain parental consent if they want to collect information about those children.

But that ban is difficult to enforce. In many cases, parents themselves help children skirt it by setting up profiles for them and lying about their ages. In addition, parents could have final say on whom their kids become friends with on Facebook.

Meanwhile ...

Facebook is allowing its users to vote on privacy policy changes and will include new sections explaining how it uses people's information. The new policy also opens up the possibility for Facebook to start showing people advertisements on outside websites, targeting the pitches to interests and hobbies that users express on Facebook. The voting period starts Friday and runs through next week. (AP)

"We are in continuous dialogue ... about how best to help parents keep their kids safe in an evolving online environment," Facebook said. BARBARA ORTUTAY (AP)

Nigeria Hunts for Crash Victims

Workers comb debris after jetliner plows into neighborhood

Lagos, Nigeria

Police dogs sniffed for dead bodies Monday in the rubble of buildings destroyed when an airliner crashed into them, killing all 153 aboard, as cranes lifted away heavy pieces of debris in the grisly aftermath of Nigeria's worst air disaster in nearly two decades.

Rescue officials said they fear many more people may have perished on the ground. The airline involved said an investigation had begun into the cause of Sunday's crash.

A Nigeria Red Cross report said 110 bodies had been recovered, with more being dug out from the rubble. A U.S. official said American citizens had been aboard the flight, and most, if not all, of whom were dual U.S.-Nigerian nationals.

The pilots reported engine trouble before the plane fell out of the sky on a clear afternoon, smashing into businesses and crowded apartment buildings near Lagos' Murtala Muhammed International Airport.

The flight was bound for Lagos, Nigeria's commercial center, from Abuja, the capital. Two years ago, the same MD-83 lost engine power due to a bird strike, according to an aviation database.

Still, the cause of the crash remained unclear Monday.

Backstory

Nigeria has a history of major aviation disasters. On Saturday night, a Nigerian Boeing 727 cargo airliner crashed in Accra, the capital of Ghana, slamming into a bus and killing 10 people. Sunday's crash in Lagos appeared to be the worst since September 1992, when a military plane crashed, killing all 163 aboard. (AP)

Jonathan spent about 20 minutes looking at the wreckage with federal lawmakers and said the crash was a setback to Nigeria's growing aviation industry.

"We will make sure this will not repeat itself in this country," Jonathan said, a pledge that will be challenging to keep in a nation with a history of major passenger plane crashes in the past 20 years.

Dining scene signals stability in formerly war-torn Mogadishu

Mogadishu, Somalia

Beachfront dining, fresh lobster and a European clientele: Somalia's restaurant scene is quickly changing for the better.

Ahmed Jama recently returned to Somalia from London to open two Western-style restaurants in two hotels he owns, one on the beachfront and the other downtown. His beachfront property has quickly become Mogadishu's version of South Beach or the French Riviera.

"This is the place of choice. Everyone recognizes it," said a customer at one of Jama's restaurants, called the Village.

This is still Mogadishu, though, scene of insurgent suicide attacks and roadside bombs. Customers here must go through two security sweeps. The grounds are protected by armed guards.

Government officials frequent Jama's restaurants, a sign of Mogadishu's improved fortunes. In the past, officials — who are favorite targets of al-Shabab assassins — were rarely seen at restaurants.

Jama's culinary success comes alongside a general revival in Mogadishu. Turkey has reopened its embassy; the U.N. has moved in new staff here.

Most of Jama's diners are European or from Somalia's diaspora. Most Somalis can't afford to dine here: The lobster dish costs $20, steak goes for about $7 and pasta about $3. Don't ask for French preparation, though.

"We don't serve foreign dishes. It's only Somali food. Our country has the best recipes," he said. (AP)

Porn Actor Held in Mailed Body Parts Case

Berlin

A Canadian porn actor suspected of murdering and dismembering a Chinese student and mailing his body parts to Canada's top political parties was reading about himself on the Internet when he was arrested Monday at a cafe in Berlin.

Canadian investigators say 29-year-old Luka Magnotta's obsessions led him to post Internet videos of his killing kittens, then a man, and finally to his arrest at the cafe where he had spent two hours reading media coverage of himself.

An international manhunt set off by a case of Internet gruesomeness that horrified the world ended quietly in the German capital.

"He tried at first giving fake names but in the end, he just said: 'You got me,'" said police spokes-

Confusion With Rush+ Service

Q I wonder if the Metro would be better off reversing the color naming for their extra trains that are part of the Rush+ program. A train starting on the Orange Line in Virginia will end on the Blue Line in Maryland. The Metro can call this train an "Orange Line" or "Blue Line" train. I propose they call it both. Call the train based on its destination. The train starting in Vienna and ending at Largo would be a Blue Line train. The train starting at Largo and ending in Vienna would be an Orange Line train. The same for the Yellow/Blue lines. I would assume that someone getting on the Metro in Virginia will be heading to DC and not mind getting on a Blue Line train on the Orange Line track. But someone getting on the Metro in D.C. would have a harder time because the Orange Line trains go to two completely different destinations in Maryland, making them more likely to get on the wrong one.

I do think there's going to be some confusion among riders when the Rush Plus changes occur on June 18. But at this point, with the new maps already posted aboard trains and in stations, it wouldn't help to start fiddling with the line colors.

Dr. Gridlock offers commuter counseling online at washingtonpost.com.

During all the discussions leading up to this, the big debate was about how to color the new trains going from Franconia-Springfield to Greenbelt. Should they still be Blues or a new color? Metro finally resolved that the easiest thing would be to call them Yellow Line trains. There wasn't much discussion of changing the color of the Orange Line trains that will go between Vienna and Largo Town Center. From a riders' perspective, the key will be to watch the destination signs.

Q As a daily rider to Shady Grove at 5 p.m., it's really frustrating to endure the delays that the turnaround at Grosvenor trains cause. Four days out of five the Shady Grove train must stop for several minutes waiting for clearance to pull into Grosvenor. And the same thing happens upon our arrival at Shady Grove — Metro knows the train is approaching Shady Grove, but we stop and wait for a spot at the platform to open up. Day after day. It's frustrating.

Yep. Same thing happens on the Silver Spring side. You know why Metro does those turnarounds, right? That the transit authority wants to get the max number of trains operating at the most crowded stations? Do you think the Red Line would be better off without the turnarounds? That would certainly increase crowding at the downtown stations, which probably would slow down all the trains.

Q So, Metro General Manager Richard Sarles was on TV Monday blatantly not telling the truth about these service changes, making it sound like EVERYONE would be getting more service. Which is obviously not true. I know they want to put a good spin on this, but they should at least acknowledge those of us who are traveling South to West are going to have our service cut.

Metro's mantra on this is "Watch the destination signs." But as you note, they have to be right. And so do the electronic displays on the platforms. Metro also needs to have plenty of staffers out on the critical platforms, at least for the first couple of weeks after this starts. So there's a lot that can go wrong.

12 WEEKS. 6 CHALLENGERS. 1 GOAL.

Our focus this week is on Mike, a chef whose long hours leave little time to think about his diet.

What has your diet been like throughout the Challenge?

Mike: I'm eating five smaller meals a day. I'll start with breakfast, which is usually steel-cut oatmeal and a banana, before my morning workout. Then, around 9:30 a.m., I'll have non-fat Greek yogurt and an apple. Lunch, anywhere from 11:30 a.m. to 1:00 p.m., consists of salad with some type of lean protein (turkey, chicken, or fish). For an afternoon snack, I'll have something such as a handful of dry roasted nuts. Dinner can consist of turkey chili, chickpea curry, or a salad with chicken — it just depends on what I have around. Also, I drink a lot of water, two cups of skim milk a day, and avoid processed foods, breads, and sweets.

What's the most difficult part of adapting yourself to a new diet?

Mike: Most difficult is making sure I go to the grocery store to get the foods I need to eat on hand, so I'm not tempted by fast food. Some of the things I've done to help with my long hours at work are preparing dishes on days off (so I can reheat a meal quickly when I get home after working 16 hours). I also keep Egg Beaters and vegetables on hand, so that can always become a quick meal.

Do you see these nutrition habits carrying over into your life after the end of the Challenge?

Mike: I do. I'm much more conscious of what I'm eating and I'm looking at labels when buying items at the grocery store. I definitely see myself sticking with the five small meals a day, because it gives me the energy I need to get through my crazy work days.

WEEK FIVE

NUTRITION: Better Food for Better Living

We all lead busy lives. Which means it's often difficult to think about — let alone practice — good nutrition habits. But the truth is that a healthy diet, customized to fit the unique pace and needs of your lifestyle and body, is just as essential to lifelong health as hours put in at the gym. And nutrition plays a key role in the Gold's Gym Get Fit Challenge. Contestants, working closely with their trainers, follow diets specially crafted to meet the demands of their work schedule, their home life — and their palates.

Mike's trainer, Emily, works closely with him to ensure success not just in the gym but at the table.

How did you work with Mike to craft his current diet?

Emily: Helping Mike with his diet was actually easy. Since he's a chef, we just talked about eating basic carbohydrates, proteins, and fats. We also focused on portion control.

What are some tips you have about healthy eating habits?

Emily: Look for healthy replacements for those foods you know you're not supposed to be eating. For example, replace chips with a fruit or vegetable. You can also change how you prepare your food; instead of frying your food, go with grilling or baking it.

Corcoran Mulls a Move

Museum says facility needs more room for its collection, college

Washington

The director and chairman of the Corcoran Gallery of Art — Washington's oldest museum — sought authorization from the gallery's board of trustees Monday afternoon to hire real estate brokers to test the market for selling the landmark building across 17th Street NW from the White House complex and to scout more affordable locations elsewhere in the Washington area.

The percentage of the Corcoran collection that can be displayed due to the small size of the museum in D.C.

The gallery's entire collection of paintings, drawings and photographs would remain intact, and the Corcoran College of Art and Design would continue to operate during any transition, said Fred Bollerer, president and director, and Harry Hopper III, chairman of the board of trustees.

The chronically underfunded institution, which posted a $7.2 million deficit for the fiscal year ended in June 2011, must consider moving because it would cost an estimated $130 million to bring the landmark Beaux Arts building up to modern museum standards — and then there still wouldn't be enough space to properly display the art and support the growing college, Bollerer and Hopper said in an interview.

The 127,000-square-foot facility was built in 1897.

"One of the clear options for us to consider is relocating to a purpose-built, technologically advanced, flexible, multipurpose facility that could house an integrated educational operation with the college at the core, coupled with the collection," Hopper said. (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Better bus service. Who's on board?

MetroExtra buses are the blue buses that get people where they're going faster — up to 20% faster — because they make fewer stops. And on June 17th, we're making MetroExtra bus service even better on several of D.C.'s busiest travel corridors.

MetroExtra 37 Wisconsin Ave and 39 Pennsylvania Ave - More trips each rush hour and adjustments to improve on-time performance.

MetroExtra 79 Georgia Avenue Limited - Adjustments to improve on-time performance.

MetroExtra S9 16th Street - More trips each rush hour for a less crowded ride.

Missing 10-Foot-Long Cigarette Located

Takoma Park, Md.

The story of the 10-foot stolen cigarette does not end well.

The pilfered yard art has been found, dismembered and left as trash next to a pile of mulch behind Takoma Park Middle School.

How the cigarette — grimly sliced in two with a chain saw — wound up a little more than two miles from its installation in the Silver Spring yard of Jeannie and Trifin Roule is unclear.

Jeannie, who works at the FDA, got a note early Monday morning from a stranger who sought out her email address after seeing the sliced cigarette on a morning walk. Jeannie called police, who found the sliced-up cigarette missing its filter, which was labeled with the word "Marlboro" in the original rendering.

Jeannie said she was saddened and somewhat angered by the whole caper.

"That someone would put all that effort into taking it and then destroying it, that's what bothers me most," she said.

"If they had stolen it and put it in their backyard or something because they liked it, that would have pleased me."

Jeannie and Trifin will rebuild. Just today, Jeannie called the telephone pole company to see about acquiring a new pole to convert, and they will add it back alongside the parking meter, the tall yellow ladder and the red silhouette of a man possibly modeled after a figure from "Mad Men."

She can get a 10-foot pole or a 25-foot pole. "Ten feet seems fine," she said. MICHAEL S. ROSENWALD (THE WASHINGTON POST)

High-Stakes Vote in Wis.

A polarized state weighs whether to recall Walker over anti-union efforts

Madison, Wis.

The battle over Gov. Scott Walker's agenda has attracted millions of dollars from out of state, campaign volunteers from across the country and months of concentrated attention from the two major political parties.

But on Tuesday, the only voices that matter will be those of Wisconsin voters deciding whether to keep Walker or fire him and hand his job to the Milwaukee mayor. After more than a year in the national spotlight, both sides are preparing for a razor-thin margin.

Polls show Walker, a Republican just 17 months into his term, with a small lead over Democrat Tom Barrett.

"You know what distresses me?" state Sen. Mark Miller said to a group of Democratic volunteers last week in Madison. "It's close. It's so darn close."

During Monday's first campaign stop, Walker said he expects a close race, too.

"We want to move on and move forward," Walker said at a plastics plant near Madison.

Walker is only the third governor in U.S. history to face a recall vote. The other two lost, most recently California's Gray Davis in 2003. Walker's lieutenant governor, Rebecca Kleefisch, and three Republican state senators also face recall votes Tuesday. In addition, voters will fill a fourth state Senate seat after the Republican incumbent resigned rather than face the recall.

Anger over Walker and his conservative agenda began building almost as soon as he took office in January 2011. Just a month into his term, Walker took the state by surprise with a proposal to effectively end collective bargaining rights for most state workers. The recall effort emerged soon thereafter.

The race has implications for national labor unions. It's also seen as a proxy fight for the presidential election, especially given the importance of Wisconsin and its 10 electoral votes.

A Marquette University Law School poll released last week showed Walker with a narrow 7-percentage-point lead over Barrett, 52 percent to 45 percent. The poll's margin of error was 4.1 percentage points. In the same poll two weeks earlier, Walker held a 6-point lead, 50 percent to 44 percent.

The poll also showed the deep division in Wisconsin, where 39 percent of respondents said they liked the job Walker has done and 38 percent said they did not like it. Twenty-one percent said they like what he's done, just not how he did it.

Repeat Challenger

Tom Barrett, Gov. Scott Walker's Democratic challenger in Tuesday's recall election, has had a rocky relationship with unions over the years. But the 58-year-old mayor of Milwaukee has promised to work toward restoring the collective bargaining rights Walker took away. Walker beat him by 5 percentage points, or about 125,000 votes, in November 2010, making Tuesday's vote a rematch of the 2010 governor's race. (AP)

Obama Stays Out

President Obama has stayed away from the recall campaign in Wisconsin, leaving some Democrats—primarily based in Wisconsin—marveling (and not in a good way) at that fact, saying a presidential visit could have made the difference for challenger Tom Barrett. Others pointed out that the issue was so localized—a fight over the stripping of collective-bargaining rights for public-sector unions in Wisconsin—that an Obama visit simply wouldn't change much.

Retired businessman Dave Flury plans to support Walker. And he's worried about what will happen if Barrett wins.

"If Walker loses, shouldn't Republicans turn right around and recall Barrett?" Flury asked.

For months, voters have been inundated with telephone calls, campaign mail and television advertising. Barrett supporter John Oehrke is ready for all of it to end.

"It doesn't really matter who wins I guess," Oehrke said. "It's all crazy."

Challenges Ahead

What Randy Wittman and the Wizards face in the coming year:

Working With Wall

By giving Wittman a reported two-year deal, the Wizards have linked him to the most critical seasons of point guard John Wall's career. The 2010 top pick has shown flashes of excellence, but has yet to reach his vast potential.

The draft

The Wizards will look at the likes of 19-year-olds Bradley Beal, above and Michael Kidd-Gilchrist, and 20-year-old Harrison Barnes with the third pick in the draft. No matter how talented those players may be, they are still incredibly young and can't be expected to lead an immediate turnaround.

Trade bait

The Wizards are going to do their best to rid themselves of Rashard Lewis and Andray Blatche. If the Wizards can't move either in a trade, they'll have to shell out nearly $37 million to buy both players out. (TWP)

Wittman Is On the Job

Wizards bring back coach who elicited strong efforts, if not many wins, last year

The Wizards

It's not too often that an 18-31 coach keeps his job in the NBA. It's especially rare if the 18-31 coach turns out to be the only candidate in the team's coaching search.

In fact, the Wizards didn't really conduct a search. Randy Wittman was the choice all along for team President Ernie Grunfeld, who announced Monday that the early-season replacement for Flip Saunders has signed a new deal.

"It wasn't a secret which direction we were going in," Grunfeld said. "We felt comfortable with the situation that we were in."

Coaching announcements can hardly get more low-key. Grunfeld and owner Ted Leonsis had hinted that Wittman would remain, and the news conference making it official attracted less media than a routine regular season game. Leonsis did not attend, but even he would have been hard-pressed to create much buzz about a status quo move for a team that's finished more than 25 games below .500 for four-straight years.

Backstory

Randy Wittman didn't have much success at previous stops in Cleveland and Minnesota before taking over as a midseason replacement for Flip Saunders. He only went 18-31 in a lockout-shortened season with the Wizards and had no time to implement his own schemes with few practices. Wittman basically had to simplify the plays of his predecessor. His imprint wasn't necessarily felt in system but in a no-nonsense style that resonated with a group of impressionable young players. He immediately brought order and accountability, something the organization had been lacking in recent years. (TWP)

"They hadn't told me I wasn't going to coach," said Wittman, who was still under contract from the deal he had signed as an assistant coach, "so I just continued on as I normally would."

Wittman — who previously coached the Cleveland Cavaliers and Minnesota Timberwolves, and his career record on the bench is a very modest 118-238 — had been Saunders' lead assistant since 2009, and he took over when Saunders was fired in January. The switch didn't make much of an impact on the won-loss record until late in the season, following a trade for veteran center Nene. The Wizards went 20-46 — second-worst in the NBA — but they finished on an upswing, winning their last six and eight of their last 10.

"He had the guys believing in what they were doing."

—FORMER WIZARDS COACH FLIP SAUNDERS PRAISING THE DECISION TO BRING BACK RANDY WITTMAN, WHO HAD BEEN AN ASSISTANT UNDER SAUNDERS FOR EIGHT YEARS.

"We've got to continue to take the positive steps that we did the last four to six weeks," Wittman said. "You could see it — there was not the disconnect anymore of guys trying to do things for themselves."

Grunfeld agreed, saying that Wittman "made the players accountable." Saunders had been originally hired to lead a veteran-laden team three years ago, while Wittman appeared to have a better rapport with the young players on the roster. Former No. 1 overall pick John Wall was among the players who publicly lobbied for Wittman to return.

"It's always nice that your players are responding in a positive manner," said Grunfeld, who also signed a new deal this year. "But they didn't have to say it. ... I think they spoke louder by their actions on the court." (AP)

United in the Hunt for Open Cup

After avoiding upset last week, D.C. takes on rival Philadelphia

Soccer

D.C. United did what eight other MLS teams could not do last week: Avoid the U.S. Open Cup upset bug.

Half of the MLS participants have already been eliminated by lower-tier teams in the unpredictable knockout tournament featuring clubs from all levels of U.S. soccer. But D.C. remains alive after Marcelo Saragosa's late winner over the third-tier Richmond Kickers last week, and will now

Familiar Foes

In order to advance to the Open Cup quarterfinals, D.C. United will need to get by Philadelphia, coached by former D.C. boss Peter Nowak and led by former D.C. players and area products Freddy Adu and Brian Carroll. If D.C. wins, the club will host the quarterfinal against either the rival New York Red Bulls or Cinderella-story Harrisburg City Islanders. A.C.

face the league-rival Philadelphia Union for their Round of 16 match at the Maryland SoccerPlex Tuesday night.

"It's interesting to see some of the results," D.C. attacker Chris Pontius said. AVI CREDITOR (FOR EXPRESS) said. "That's what you get in these games when you don't put these teams away. It's tough to play against them considering sometimes it's their biggest game of the year."

D.C. should be near full strength for Tuesday's match, save for Dwayne De Rosario and Dejan Jakovic, who are currently with the Canadian national team.

The Cup winner earns a place in the CONCACAF Champions League — the regional competition involving teams from all countries in North America, Central America and the Caribbean — and D.C. has its eye on a shot to compete on the grand stage. "It's a chance for us to get a trophy back," D.C. coach Ben Olsen said. AVI CREDITOR (FOR EXPRESS)

Capitals Trade Goalie Vokoun to Penguins

Veteran was made expendable by rise of Holtby in playoffs

The Capitals

The Capitals traded goaltender Tomas Vokoun to the rival Pittsburgh Penguins for a seventh-round draft pick on Monday.

Vokoun spent only one season with the Capitals and is set to become an unrestricted free agent on July 1. He was signed last summer as one of several veterans pegged to help the team win its first Stanley Cup.

But Vokoun hurt his groin late in the season and sat out the playoffs. With the emergence of Braden Holtby in the postseason, the Capitals are set at goalie with Holtby and Michal Neuvirth. The 35-year-old Vokoun finished with a record of 25-17-2 in D.C. (AP)

Tomas Vokoun went 25-17-2 in one season as the Caps' starting goaltender. (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Meanwhile ...

Highly-touted Capitals prospect Evgeny Kuznetsov has made his decision to remain in the KHL official and signed a new two-year deal with Traktor Chelyabinsk. Last month, Kuznetsov, 20, said that he was "not ready to go to the NHL right now" and that he wanted to remain in Russia through the 2014 Olympics in Sochi. (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Guinea Pig | That's Nuts

Who needs Match.com when you have this many dates? Of course, the ones in a Kit's Organic Fruit + Nut Bar ($1.59) are the edible kind, combined with almonds, cashews or peanuts and other organic ingredients. The result is a tasty 200-calorie or less treat, but be careful before you scarf down too many. The chocolate almond coconut one has a whopping 4.5 g of saturated fat, and none of them have much protein (3-6 g).

In the Very, Very Long Run

Ultramarathoner
Scott Jurek discusses training and fueling up for epic distances

Scott Jurek always goes the extra mile — and the mile after that. Since his first ultramarathon (that's any race longer than 26.2 miles) in 1994 when he was 20, the Midwesterner has notched an exhausting-even-to-look-at list of performances, including his completion of 165.7 miles at the 24-Hour World Championships race in 2010. In his new book, "Eat & Run," Jurek shares stories from his extraordinary career and explains why he sticks with a strict vegan diet. He'll be at a fun run and signing in Arlington on Friday (the run starts at the Nature Conservancy headquarters at 6:30 p.m.; the signing at Pacers starts at 7:30 p.m.; visit PacerEvents.com for more information).

What makes you run ultramarathons?

Initially, it was a dare from a buddy. I didn't have this idea that I was going to become a professional ultrarunner. But basically, nowadays, I look at it as a way for me to explore the human potential in me.

Was there ever a moment when it clicked for you, when you knew that ultras were your thing?

It took a while. The first time I finished, it was like, 'Never again' — much like a lot of people after their first 5K or 10K or half-marathon. But it was this gradual realization.

How might somebody else know if they are ultra material?

I think everybody's ultra material.

Scott Jurek, left, has raced the famously talented Tarahumara Indians in Mexico's 50-mile Copper Canyon Ultramarathon.

"We all have that ability. Humans were meant to run long distances; we all have that endurance capability."

We all have that ability. Humans were meant to run long distances; we all have that endurance capability. You don't need to be an amazing athlete. You just need to have the will.

And the time to fit in the training?

I know runners who run 100-milers who have careers, very stressful jobs, families, and they run 100-mile races on 30 miles a week [of training], so you don't need a lot of time. But if you want to place at the top and if you're going to win, sure, you have to put the time in.

What's your training like?

I'm not out there four or five hours a day, like a lot of people assume. We do back-to-back type training, so you run two long runs on back-to-back days. I might run 20 to 30 miles on Saturday and then another 20 to 30 on Sunday. That's how you replicate 60, 70, 80 miles into a race; you want your legs to get fatigued and develop a fatigue resistance. But during the week I get on the track, do short interval workouts, tempo threshold runs and hill repeats. And then I mix in strength training, core training, yoga.

As a vegan, do you have to take any special considerations to be sure you're eating enough?

Not at all, surprisingly. There are plenty of great fats and calories in nuts, nut butters, tempeh, tofu, legumes and grains that provide enough protein. It's a little tricky when traveling in remote areas, but it can be done. I actually enjoy the challenge sometimes.

Since you spend so much time running long, what's it like for you to run a short distance, say a 5K?

Oh, if I race short distances, it's just as hard. It's a lot less time, but the discomfort and how hard you work ... that can be just as challenging as sometimes running 50 miles at a shot. It's not like a walk in the park. KATIE ABERBACH (EXPRESS)

Recipe File

Spirulina is a green algae said to have been carried into battle by Aztec warriors. It's also a complete protein that's shown promising results as a performance enhancer for long-distance runners. So this smoothie, which is rich in vitamins and minerals, is an excellent source of nutrition. For an extra carb boost, replace 1 cup water with 1 cup apple or grape juice.

GREEN POWER PRE-WORKOUT DRINK

Ingredients

- 2 bananas
- 1 cup frozen or fresh mango or pineapple chunks
- 4 cups water
- 2 tsp spirulina powder
(Because spirulina is marketed as a dietary supplement rather than a food, the FDA does not regulate its production; buy it only from a store and a brand you trust)
- 1/2 tsp sugar
- 1 tsp miso

Makes Two 20-Ounce Servings

Place all the ingredients in a blender and blend for 1 to 2 minutes, until the mixture is completely smooth. Drink 20 to 30 ounces (2 1/2 to 3 1/4 cups) 15 to 45 minutes before a run.

When Opposites Aren't Attracting

Q A good friend of mine and I both have 10-year-old daughters. We've had gatherings and play-dates since they were little, about once every other month. The past few times it's become painfully obvious that our girls don't connect much anymore. My daughter is into sports and the outdoors, whereas my friend's daughter is into TV and boys and fashion. I'd rather nip this in the bud before things get awkward, but I don't want to hurt my friend's feelings. I value our friendship, but just don't need it to involve our daughters anymore. MOM FRICTION

Might she feel the same, or does she just not seem to notice that your daughter is out climbing trees while hers is salivating over Justin Bieber?

A good first step in making your friendship not about your daughters is to, well, make it not about your daughters. Invite your friend out just the two of you, and try to do those outings for a while. If she brings up the change, you can simply say that lately it's seemed the girls have different interests, and you rather enjoy the one-on-one time without having to worry about everyone else's compatibility.

Send your questions to Dr. Andrea Bonior at baggage@readexpress.com. Andrea is a local clinical psychologist and author of the book "The Friendship Fix" (Friendshipfix.com).

He's Not the Boss at Home

Q My husband is a kind person — or so I've always thought — but when he's frustrated, he says things that are rude, bossy and demeaning. He has a stressful job and I think that at the end of the day he wants to take it out on me or treat me like an employee. I've tried to talk to him about it, but he says I should just ignore him if I can tell that he's in one of his rants. I can't ignore it, and I don't think I should have to. HURT WIFE

I know that the last thing someone in a demanding job wants to hear is that they need to take on another demanding job — doing some psychological work. But "Let me mistreat you, and you just pretend that I don't" is simply not an acceptable modus operandi for husband-wife relations.

His behavior has to change, and it will take effort. Pick a quiet time when he's in a good mood to tell him that the pattern is unsustainable, and you want to work with him to change it. It could be anything from a list of coping strategies (meditation, a walk, working out) to self-help books to a new job to counseling, but he's got to start somewhere.

Classic Wheels

Your bike will be busy this weekend. Minimalist shoes offer less support and heel cushioning, cautions Jim Christina, a Maryland podiatrist and director of scientific affairs for the American Podiatric Medical Association. Every pineapple pop at Founding Farmers is garnished with lime and pineapple.

Pop Stars

Restaurants will fill your cup with fizzy fruit juice and herbs

A new trend is bubbling up: Restaurants are making their own sodas in-house, without the high-fructose corn syrup, the preservatives or the weird additives you usually gulp. Cool off this summer by ordering up one of these refreshments — in sizes even New York Mayor Mike Bloomberg would approve of.

Founding Farmers

From-scratch sodas are so popular at this farm-to-table restaurant's Potomac location that they outsell Coke and Diet Coke combined. Chief mixologist Jon Arroyo wants to drop commercial colas entirely, so he's been working on his own version for more than a year. "It's the hardest soda to make," he says. "Just think of all the artisanal colas you like. There probably aren't any." The good news is he's already nailed the pineapple pop ($5), which includes a squirt of lime juice and fresh mint. • 12505 Park Potomac Ave., Potomac, Md.; 301-340-8783, Wearefoundingfarmers.com.

Firefly

The Summer Spice Fizz ($5) at this Dupont spot sports a yellowish hue — and a whole lot of flavor. That's because the citrus concoction of orange, lemon and lime is sassed up with ginger, nutmeg, cinnamon, vanilla and homemade lavender syrup made with raw sugar.

• 1310 New Hampshire Ave. NW; 202-861-1310, Firefly-dc.com.

Elisir

"We took the whole craft bar concept and applied it to soda," says general manager Justin Kraemer. The menu always has a few options, such as rosemary-pear ($5). It's made by muddling together simple syrup, freshly squeezed lemon, juicy pears and rosemary. Once the soda water is added, it's ready for you to drink up. • 427 11th St. NW; 202-546-0088, Elisirrestaurant.com.

Graffiato

The zingy five-spice ginger beer ($5) is made by simmering cinnamon, coriander, allspice, clove and star anise with sugar and water to create a simple syrup, which is combined with lemon and ginger. Head mixologist Taha Ismail plans on changing the flavors with the seasons. He's already done blood orange-habanero and strawberry-cardamom. "People are surprised to see them on the menu," he says. "But I didn't want to do something that you'd expect." • 707 6th St. NW; 202-289-3600, Graffiatodc.com. NEVIN MARTELL (FOR EXPRESS)

Sound Bets

Forever Funk

Protect-U is a modern-day duo from D.C., though a blindfolded listening test might indicate otherwise: Mike Petillo and Aaron Leitko's synthesized funk sounds like it's from another place and time, conjured somewhere in Europe in the late '70s or early '80s. The band's flowing jams feel like the extended portion of an ancient Human League remix that never returns to the song's core.

After releasing two well-received 12-inches on Petillo's Future Times label, Protect-U has made an international leap with its new EP, "Motorbike." Released by England's Planet Mu, the influential label run by Mike Paradinas (μ-Ziq), this new three-song 12-inch captures all that makes Protect-U's take on electro-funk so appealing. Petillo and Leitko — a music critic for The Washington Post — became a band by happenstance, after performing late-night improvisations on analog synths. That's still Protect-U's working method, and you can feel the loose-limbed roots in the wobbly, boogie-down productions.

The repetitive, open-ended elements can make for a tough listen at home, but they provide the perfect headphone soundtrack for a long run through Rock Creek Park or an all-night dance-floor meltdown.

Look Who's Talking Now

'$#!' My Dad Says' creator Justin Halpern offers his own advice with 'I Suck at Girls'

Books

Justin Halpern will always be in debt to his father. In 2009, the aspiring TV writer moved in with his parents after a bad breakup. For fun, he started a Twitter feed — @StuffMyDadSays — where he chronicled his father's expletive-laden life lessons. Halpern became an Internet sensation; a book and a (canceled) sitcom followed.

Halpern mines his personal life for humor again in his second book, "I Suck at Girls" ($16.99, It Books). It traces the ups and (mostly) downs that took him from awkward adolescent to a happily married man. He'll speak in Washington on Wednesday about dating woes and daddy issues.

Your comedic voice really shines through in your essays. Has it been harder for you to get your personality out writing for TV?

A little bit, because I haven't been doing it long enough to be really good at it yet. Or even to be good at. I'm still learning, whereas I've been writing essays and stuff for 10-12 years, so it's a little easier to express myself there.

Working on '$#!' My Dad Says,' the sitcom, did you feel like everything was falling apart?

No, because our ratings were never terrible. I didn't have that sky-is-falling feeling. I definitely thought creatively it was way different than I had first envisioned, so I knew that.

So it was a different experience writing for "How to Be a Gentleman," which was canceled after two episodes?

That was like an unmitigated disaster. That was explosive. That was like the stench of a dead body. Everybody knew very early on, "this is not working out."

You're adapting "I Suck at Girls" into a sitcom with "Scrubs" creator Bill Lawrence. It seems like he will fight to keep your vision, considering he was able to keep "Cougar Town" alive.

I'm actually writing on "Cougar Town" next season. I'm excited to have a job. I think it's going to find a big audience on TBS and they're going to be happy they picked it up. I just hope I don't screw it up.

What are you aiming for with "I Suck at Girls"?

I'm going to try to make our generation's "The Wonder Years." Even if it ends up half as good, I'll consider it a victory. It takes place in the early '90s. I wanted to do it before the Internet. My dad is still a character in this, but he's not the central character, and it's a different version of him.

Did you have to embellish in the book because there were holes in your memory you couldn't fill?

Absolutely, 100 percent. Any memoirist who says they remember everything is a total liar.

You've built your career, in a lot of ways, on your dad. Does he take credit for your success?

No. He does the exact opposite

"My dad is still a character in this, but he's not the central character, and it's a different version of him."

of that. He very much downplays it, even where I'm like, "C'mon, you're definitely largely responsible for this."

Now that you're happily married, do you have any wisdom to pass on to other guys who feel like they too suck at girls?

Love and relationships are a series of really humiliating and depressing failures, and then, at the very end, you get one victory and that's all you need. It's the only thing in life like that. If you write 20 stories and 19 are terrible, you've failed. If you go out on 20 dates and 19 of them are horrendous but one of them is amazing, then you win.

Out on Top: In an unusual move announced Monday, Starz will conclude its highly successful action-adventure series "Spartacus" while it's still a hit, and after logging only three seasons (or four, counting a "prequel" season). This season the series, which stars Liam McIntyre, left, drew 6 million viewers, a huge number for a paid subscription channel. Creator Steven S. DeKnight promises a "stunningly epic" final season, which will air in January. (AP)

Michelle Obama gives gardening tips in 'American Grown'

Book Review

First lady Michelle Obama says her plan to plant a high profile vegetable garden at the White House left her with last-minute worries that it would flop.

"What if the seeds or seedlings were not set in correctly and we ended up with empty beds? What if we couldn't control the weeds?" She recounts her trepidation in her first book, "American Grown: The Story of the White House Kitchen Garden and Gardens Across America" ($30, Crown).

Obama organized the planting of the garden three years ago as part of her crusade to improve the quality and nutrition of the nation's diet. The garden occupies a once-grassy corner of the South Lawn and was planted with the help of 23 fifth-graders at Bancroft Elementary School in the District. Originally 1,100 square feet in area, it is now 1,500 square feet and provides food for White House luncheons, the

As she discovered, home gardening is a series of triumphs and setbacks.

Obama family's meals and state dinners. About one-third of the produce is given to a local food bank.

Obama, a novice gardener when she began the project, said her early worries were unfounded: "The garden took. As I had hoped, it also became a learning garden, and the garden team and I were among its first pupils." The garden is tended by White House horticulturists, chefs and employees who volunteer.

As she discovered, home gardening is a series of triumphs and setbacks. In the first season, she found the growing beds so wide that people had to step into them, the plant spacing was sometimes too tight and rainstorms eroded beds.

"Whatever detours or bumps in the road we would face, I was determined that this garden would succeed," she writes. Part of that success, she says, is that the garden "helped us start a new conversation about the food we eat and how it affects our children's health."

A message from Metro General Manager Richard Sarles

We're now less than a week away from the launch of Rush+, new rush hour service designed to ease crowding and improve the commuting experience for more than 100,000 Metrorail riders.

The new service, which begins Monday, June 18, provides additional trains every rush hour, more frequent train service at 21 stations and new transfer-free commuting options for thousands of customers on the Orange, Blue, Yellow and Green lines.

By now, I hope you have read the signs, seen the new Metrorail map and heard the system announcements about Rush+. If you haven't already done so, I encourage you to visit the website, wmata.com/rushplus, to learn more because come June 18, you may have some new commuting options. For example, if you're at Franconia-Springfield, you may be able to get to DC quicker by taking the Yellow Line train toward Greenbelt. If you're an Orange Line rider, you'll be able to ride past Stadium-Armory to Largo Town Center without transferring.

All of these changes are illustrated on the new Metrorail map, which has been redesigned as part of the process. We know many of you rely on this iconic map to navigate the system and we see it as one of the most effective ways to communicate the new service patterns.

In addition to looking at the map, here are some tips as you get accustomed to Rush+:

- Look for destination signs on trains, not just the line color.
- Pay close attention to station and operator announcements.
- Get a copy of the Rush+ Pocket Guide from the station manager's kiosk.
- Ask your station manager.
- View videos, use interactive maps and learn more at wmata.com/rushplus.

These changes are among the most significant service changes we've made since completing the Metrorail system and also a key step for Metro as we prepare for the start of Silver Line service.

Rush+ service will be in effect on weekdays between 6:30 and 9 a.m., and between 3:30 and 6 p.m. For more information, visit wmata.com/rushplus.

Given the competition, it's a tough job singling out summer's most brainless series, but the returning reality spectacle "Love in the Wild" deserves special attention. It's "The Dating Game" meets "Indiana Jones" as 14 singles strive to find romance while competing in pairs and sometimes trios in games of endurance under challenging and occasionally yucky circumstances. Tonight, they have to swim through dark water filled with snakes. Even after that grim task, seven singles will be sent home.

Republic, where it is set. This year's host is Jenny McCarthy, a former Playboy model who became host of MTV's "Singled Out" in the '90s.

McCarthy departed from her caricature as the generically curvaceous Marilyn-du-jour after becoming a mother and lending her credibility to several New Age theories associating autism with childhood vaccines.

One would think that McCarthy's association with a cause as controversial and "heavy" as that would preclude her involvement with such mindless piffle as "Love in the Wild." But, hey, this is NBC, where a radioactive reputation (like those of Howard Stern and Donald Trump) seems to enhance your chances for hosting silly spectacles.

ACTIVISION/AP

“‘Twilight’ won everything except for the times when ‘Hunger Games’ did. What an unpredictable twist of events that was. Hilariously, Jennifer Lawrence didn’t even bother to show up while a Robert Pattinson-less Kristen Stewart somehow realized through a fog of bong resin that she’s the only sucker who gets forced to show up to these things year-after-year.”

— THESUPERFICIAL.COM offers a review of the MTV Movie Awards Sunday night at the Gibson Amphitheatre in Universal City, Calif.

“In hip hop women [are] always expected to ‘be cool’ [about] completely out of line behavior from our male counterparts. No dice.”

— @AMANDASEALES, host of MTV’s “Hip Hop POV,” didn’t appreciate what she had to deal with at Hot 97’s SummerJam concert at MetLife Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J., Sunday.

“HALO is the Nickelback of video games.”

— @VERCENGETORIXII reacts to news that Microsoft announced the launch of ‘Halo 4’ at the Electronics Entertainment Expo, better known as E3 in Los Angeles this week.

“What is it like to be a Gawker commenter? ... Is it as difficult as it seems? How long, on average, do they spend per day thinking up the perfect thing to say that no one will ever care about? And when Gawker tweaks its commenting system — like it did [Monday], again — do they seriously care as much as they act like they do? Because good lord. Being a Gawker commenter sounds insanely difficult.”

— Chris O’Shea at MEDIABISTRO. COM/FISHBOWLNY was surprised by the backlash the media company received for changes on its website.

Horoscope

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You're going to have to make a choice very quickly, and if you trust your instincts, it can surely be the right choice.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You may be distracted and unable to comprehend everything that is going on around you today. Your understanding helps another in turn.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You won't be able to tell immediately whether you are doing what is expected of you — or whether you must adjust your methods as you progress.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You may not hear from someone with whom you are working very closely until all parties are close to finishing their assigned tasks.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You're likely to get quite excited about a new project once the powers that be tell you a little something about what is to come.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Someone you know and love will tempt you with tales of what is to come — and every detail will have you yearning for more.

SAGITTARIUS

(Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Someone may be moving the starting line bit by bit away from you. Do what you can to minimize any disadvantage that may result.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You're likely to get a good deal of advice telling you what to do — but you will want to know the specifics of how to do it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You'll want to set yourself a task today that you can do without much trouble — just to get yourself moving. Momentum is everything.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You'll receive updates throughout the day that provide you with information as it shifts and changes.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) More responsibility — and, ultimately, more pay. You're willing to do the work for the reward.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You may be unusually adept at doing more than one thing at once today. Don't let anyone make you think that this can become a habit, however.

RELIGIOUS ORDERS

Humphries Last Pick in Fantasy Monastery Draft

Kim Kardashian has moved on, and rumors this weekend suggested that Kris Humphries had, too. Not true, reported Radaronline.com. "Kris won't even consider dating anyone until his divorce to Kim is finalized," said an unnamed source. "He just isn't ready to date yet and doesn't want a serious relationship. Kris isn't living like a monk and goes out with his buddies to clubs," the source added. (EXPRESS)

Is This What We're Calling Vow Renewals Now?

Fifteen months after their Feb. 25, 2011, marriage, Kelsey Grammer and Kayte Grammer married again, this time in Las Vegas on Saturday, People.com reported. "We wanted to celebrate and re-dedicate [ourselves] to how much we love each other and to our growing family around the bend," Grammer said. (EXPRESS)

Apologies

Cricket Just Glad To Be Mentioned

Jason Alexander has apologized for joking that he considers cricket a "gay" sport. In a blog post, he explained Sunday what led to his remark on CBS' "Late Late Show." The 1,000-word-plus "message of amends" said that the joking remark plays into "hurtful assumptions and diminishments" about people. (AP)

IF INGESTED

Sigh, Roll Eyes, Vomit

On the "Today" show Monday, Celine Dion responded to comments made by Kate Winslet in March about how "My Heart Will Go On," Dion's hit "Titanic" single, causes her to suffer "massive internal eye roll[s]" and nausea. "If I just count how many times I've sung it, maybe it'll get me sick," said Dion Monday. "If she feels tired just hearing it, and, like, throwing up, I'm glad she was not the one singing it." ### Unless the Outcome Saves Some Sea Life, No One Cares

Stephen Baldwin and Kevin Costner are facing each other in court over a 2010 suit filed by Baldwin, who claims Costner misled him in dealings with a company that sells oil-spill cleanup machines. According to TMZ.com, Baldwin says Costner knew the company was about to make a killing off BP and did not tell Baldwin, who sold his shares before a $52 million deal with BP went down. (EXPRESS)

Healthy adult volunteers needed

The National Institute of Mental Health is conducting outpatient research studies on fear and anxiety at the National Institutes of Health Clinical Center in Bethesda, Maryland.

Over a period of one to three visits of one to three hours each, participants will be interviewed and possibly complete a series of tests during which your heart rate will be recorded.

Volunteers must be between 18-50 years of age, medically healthy, and not be taking medication. There is no cost for study-related tests. Compensation will be provided.
